Mother Andrea Packwood, president of California Family Advocacy, learned that Contra Costa County social worker Acacia Chidi has a history of arrests.

Packwood obtained the Broward Sherriff's Office records (READ HERE-Acacia) in Florida on Shindonna Monique Bell aka Shindonna Monique Thomas aka Donna Monique Thomas aka Acacia Hasina Chida aka Acacia H Chadi aka Koray Bell.

Chidi was arrested on May 27, 2007 and charged with Aggravated Battery with a Deadly Weapon, Disorderly Conduct – Breach of the Peace, "RESIST OFFICER – OBSTRUCT WITHOUT VIOLENCE," and criminal mischief.

The records show that Chidi has three tattoos including a right thigh tattoo that reads "SHE DEVIL."

When Packwood inquired about Chidi's past, Chidi became confrontational over text message with Packwood.

If you address me by any other name other than Acacia Chidi, I take that as a threat, Verbal abuse, to be inappropriate, to be threatening, in an attempt on your part to intimidate me, and children and family services.

I have informed you in my previous text of the consequences should you threaten me, or call me outside of my legal name. It is your choice to do so or not. Should you choose to do so, the actions stated will be taken.

Packwood accused the county of being "well aware and complacent."

Contra Costa County CPS did not provide comment for this report.

In nearby Sacramento County, the Sacramento Bee reported in 2009: "A review of the agency's 969 workers employed as of Oct. 1 found that at least 68 individuals – 7 percent of the work force – have criminal records in Sacramento County alone. The number is likely to be even higher because some names were too common to retrieve all criminal complaints linked to them, and records in other counties were not searched."

MSNBC's Chris Matthews, a vocal critic of Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT), has now compared the Sanders campaign as Nazi-like, using similar phrasing to his 2017 condemnation of President Trump's inaugural address.

As it began to become clear that Sanders gained a decisive victory in the Democratic Party's Nevada caucus, Matthews began bemoaning the idea of Sanders becoming the nominee, and went as far as to compare his recent electoral wins to the rise of Hitler.

"It looks like Bernie sanders is hard to beat right now," said Matthews. "They're sitting on so much oppo research on Bernie, what he's said in the past about world affairs, how far left he is,"

"They're gonna kill him," he continued. "I think it's a little late to stop him, and I think that's the problem."

Matthews noted that the Sanders campaign has won every state's popular vote, while the majority of delegates in Iowa went to South Bend Indiana Mayor Pete Buttigieg.

"By the way if you look at the pattern it's dynamic. Bernie won the popular vote in Iowa, he won it again in New Hampshire, and it looks like he's gonna win it here when they finally get a vote," Matthews added.

"Bernie's been winning consistently, and I think it's mathematically understandable."

At this point in the brief three minute exchange, Matthews then likened Sanders' victory in Iowa to the Nazi invasion of France in 1940.

"I was reading last night Brian, I know you're a history guy too," said Matthews. "I was reading last night about the fall of France in the summer of 1940, and the General Renou calls up Churchill and says it's over."

"And Churchill says how can it be? You've got the greatest army in Europe? He said it's over."

Matthews added, "So I had that suppressed feeling."

Earlier in the day, Matthews expressed concern over what a Democratic Party led by Sanders would mean for the party's future.

National File reported:

> "I'm wondering whether the Democratic moderates want Bernie Sanders to be president," said Matthews. "I mean that's maybe too exciting of a question to raise, they don't like Trump at all."
>
> He added, "Do they want Bernie Sanders to take over the Democratic Party in perpetuity? I mean he takes it over, he sets the direction for the future of the party. Maybe they want four years and they put in a Democrat they like?"

Matthews, of course, claimed President Trump's inaugural address was "Hitlerian" in its content, comparing the nascent president to the Third Reich.

"When he said today, 'America First,' it was not just the racial, I shouldn't say racial, the Hitlerian background to it," Matthews said in 2017.

"I kept thinking, 'What is Teresa May think of this when she picks up the papers," Matthews continued. "What if you're Putin, you're probably pounding the table and saying 'That's what I've been saying! Russia First.'"

VIDEO: MSNBC's Chris Matthews, After Years of Trump Bashing, Now Fears a Bernie-Led Democrat Party

Matthews seems to fear what Bernie might do to the Democratic Party.

As early results showed Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) handily winning the Democratic Party's Nevada Caucus, MSNBC host Chris Matthews began to express concern that a Sanders nomination "sets the direction for the future of the party."

Despite the revelation that Russian actors are attempting to help Sanders in the 2020 election coming only hours before the Nevada caucus, Sanders handily won the event with his apparent victory obvious soon after voting began.

This led a panel on MSNBC, featuring Matthews, to question the future of the party if it is to be led by Sanders.

"I'm wondering whether the Democratic moderates want Bernie Sanders to be president," said Matthews. "I mean that's maybe too exciting of a question to raise, they don't like Trump at all."

He added, "Do they want Bernie Sanders to take over the Democratic Party in perpetuity? I mean he takes it over, he sets the direction for the future of the party. Maybe they want four years and they put in a Democrat they like?"

Prominent progressive writers and commentators immediately noted the significance of Matthews' statement.

"Mask off: Chris Matthews suggest Democratic establishment better off with four more years of Trump than sanders movement reshaping party," wrote Common Dreams' Senior Editor Eoin Higgins.

Glenn Greenwald, the internationally known journalist who now writes for The Intercept, said Matthews is "positioning himself to back Trump's re-election."

"With the Sanders surge, one MSNBC host – one of their highest-paid and most prominent ones – now positioning himself to back Trump's reelection," wrote Greenwald. "After 4 years of non-stop alarmism about Trump the fascist dictator Russian puppet posing an existential threat to US democracy."

Earlier this week, Matthews claimed that a Sanders nomination would secure President Trump's second term.

Matthews has been one of President Trump's most vocal critics, slamming the president's inaugural address as "Hitlerian" in 2017.
